

In this edition:

- How to deal with irregular income
- Smart ways to financially get ahead in your 40s
- Prepare for the rising Age Pension age
- Enjoy luxuries

If you are new to reading The Key newsletter, welcome. If you are an avid reader of this publication you would be familiar with this forum, delivering relevant and interesting content from the financial planning industry, to help you better manage your financial life. A core value of our business is that every Australian should have access to, and benefit from, good financial advice. In reading this publication, we hope that you find the articles interesting, and perhaps they will provide some talking points for your next review meeting with your financial adviser.

Enjoy reading this edition of The Key.

How to deal with irregular income

Beat the challenge of having irregular income by planning your finances.

Managing your finances can be challenging if your income fluctuates from month to month. People like self-employed business owners, freelance writers, new entrepreneurs and contractors need to plan how their money will last until their next payment comes.

While this can be difficult, the following tips may help you gain stability and security in your finances.

Create a budget

Having a budget is crucial to ensuring you have enough money to cover your essential expenses and build up your savings. A budget tracks your spending on a weekly or monthly basis and factors in your income (taking into account fluctuations), expenses and financial obligations. It may help you set limits on your discretionary spending – such as eating out and unnecessary shopping – to help you stretch your income. Perhaps most importantly, it may keep you from over-spending when your next payment comes through.

Build your contingency fund

Everyone needs a contingency fund to cover unexpected events such as unforeseen medical costs. But having money socked away for emergencies is even more important if your income is unpredictable.

This money may help you stay afloat during periods of little or no income.

Increase your income

You don't have to fully rely on your job or trade for income. If you have enough savings on top of your contingency fund, you may want to consider investing a portion of your money. Your professional financial adviser could recommend strategies to help you generate an income from your investments.

Boost your retirement fund

You may not be considering retirement savings when you have irregular income, but it's vital for your financial security. If you're looking to bolster your superannuation account, the 'catch-up' scheme helps eligible individuals increase their super savings by allowing them to make catch-up concessional contributions.

From 1 July 2018, members with a total super balance of less than $500,000 can 'carry forward' any unused amount below the concessional contribution cap on a rolling basis for five years.

Before you decide to make a contribution, it is wise to get professional financial advice so you fully understand your contribution options.

Get insurance protection

Consider taking out insurance to protect your income should a sudden illness or injury prevent you from earning.

Income protection insurance may provide a monthly income while you're unable to work.

But depending on your job, different types of income protection insurance have different benefits and employment requirements.

Speak to your financial adviser to see if such a policy might work for you or how you may tailor a plan to meet your income protection needs.

Smart ways to financially get ahead in your 40s

In your 40s and still not financially secure? Don't fret. You can still catch up.

Being in your 40s often involves balancing different priorities. For example, you may need to care for your ageing parents, grow your career or business, and if you're a parent, support your children.

With all these responsibilities, it's easy to neglect your own financial wellbeing, including building your long-term savings. But it's not too late to try secure your future. Here are some tips to help you financially make the most of your 40s.

Make a plan

If you don't have a financial plan, it's time to get one.

A financial plan may help you stay on track by identifying your long-term goals and the steps you could take to reach them. Ensure that it's based on your specific needs and priorities – and is realistic. By working with a professional adviser, you may be able to tailor a plan that optimises your ability to invest and save for the important things.

Grow your savings

Your 40s can be your peak earning years. Data from the Australian Bureau of Statistics shows that in 2016, employees aged 45 to 54 earned $1,479.90 in average weekly total cash earnings, the highest of all age groups.¹

This may be a good decade then to ramp up your savings and funnel some of your income into your superannuation through salary sacrifice, for instance. But be sure to do your homework and speak with a financial adviser to find out what your options are.

Give your super a health check

Speaking of super, do you know how your account is doing?

A quick super health check may help you increase your retirement savings. For example, by choosing a different investment option or type of risk, you may be able to earn better returns on your super.

If you have multiple super funds, consolidating your accounts may mean you could save on fees. Super can be a difficult subject to get your head around, so it is recommended you consult a professional financial adviser about how you could bolster your super.

Avoid lifestyle creep

People have a tendency to inflate their standard of living as they earn more and can afford more things like a better house or car, or more holidays.

While it's only natural to want the finer things in life, it's wise not to get caught in a cycle of upgrading your lifestyle beyond your means. You'll likely end up with little to no financial gain if your spending rises as quickly as your income. Stick to the plan you've developed with your financial adviser and stay focused on your financial goals.

Consider investing more

Your 40s may be a good time to invest more – or diversify your existing investments – to help you grow your long-term savings and try stay ahead of inflation. Although leaving your money in a fixed-income vehicle may reduce your risk of losing money, inflation might erode the value of your capital.

If you decide to invest more, or more aggressively, keep in mind that it's important to choose instruments that suit your risk appetite and time horizon. Developing a strategy with your financial adviser might make it easier to achieve the return required to reach your financial goals.

Your 40s can be a juggling act of different priorities, but they could also be a great opportunity to set up new, healthy financial habits. By putting these into practice, balancing your financial responsibilities may be that little less difficult.

Seek advice

Your financial adviser can review your finances and work with you on a financial plan based on your needs and priorities, to help you achieve your goals in your 40s.

1 Australian Bureau of Statistics, May 2016, 'Employee Earnings and Hours'. Accessible at: <http://www.abs.gov.au/ausstats/abs@.nsf/mf/6306.0>

Prepare for the rising Age Pension age

Are you affected by the increase in the Age Pension's qualifying age? Take steps now to help secure your retirement income.

The minimum age to qualify for the Age Pension has started going up. For those born on or after 1 July 1952, the qualifying age increases by six months every two years until it reaches 67 in July 2023. It rises to 66 in July this year.

The following table illustrates the qualifying age by birthdate and the effective date of each pension age increase.

Date	Affects men and women born (both dates inclusive)	Pension age
01/07/2017	01/07/1952 to 31/12/1953	65 years and 6 months
01/07/2019	01/01/1954 to 30/06/1955	66 years
01/07/2021	01/07/1955 to 31/12/1956	66 years and 6 months
01/07/2023	On or after 01/01/1957	67 years

If you're turning 45 this year, for example, and plan to ease into retirement when you reach 60, you will need to wait until you're 67 before you can apply for the Age Pension. You'll have to rely on your own savings and superannuation in the interim.

This makes it crucial to ensure you have enough money put away for later years. But the good news is that there's still time to grow your retirement savings.

Boosting your super

Contributing more to your super can be a reliable route to bolstering your retirement fund.

By making extra contributions through salary sacrifice, you can grow your super and at the same time reduce the amount of income tax you pay. Including your employer's super guarantee contribution, you can make concessional contributions of up to $25,000 each financial year.

The government will tax your salary-sacrificed contributions at 15 per cent, which could be much lower than your marginal tax rate.

Making non-concessional or after-tax contributions is another option. You can contribute up to $100,000 each financial year if your total superannuation balance is less than $1.6 million. To understand how these contributions work and how you can make the most of them, it's wise to get professional advice.

Beefing up your long-term savings

Your personal savings can supplement your super payments in retirement. But are they growing enough now to provide you with some income when you retire?

To build up your savings, you may have to invest part of it and ensure it's growing faster than the rate of inflation.

Investing in a managed fund or buying an investment bond may help you increase your nest egg, but you should seek professional advice to see if these instruments are appropriate for you.

Your financial adviser may also suggest ways to spread your investments, to help you lower the risk of losing money.

Knowing your entitlements

Besides the Age Pension, you may be eligible for other government benefits and concessions. The Seniors Card, for example, offers individuals over the age of 60 discounts on some commercial and public services such as transportation. Concessions that allow you to buy prescription medicine at a discount are also available.

But keep in mind that these benefits have strict eligibility rules. The laws governing them also change quite often. There's no guarantee that these entitlements will still be available by the time you retire.

Take charge of your retirement

By working with your financial adviser, you can develop a strategy that helps ensure you'll be well provided for regardless of changes to pension policies.

Enjoy luxuries without sacrificing your financial security

By making smart choices, you could indulge in luxury goods and still protect your financial wellbeing.

It's sensible to grow your money as much as you can by saving regularly and investing in assets that can help you accumulate wealth. But it's also important to enjoy the money you've worked hard for by, for example, acquiring luxury items or investing in passions such as antiques and art.

Research shows that consuming products of desire can be beneficial to individuals. It can improve their state of mind and lead to greater life satisfaction.¹ But how can you indulge in such purchases without sacrificing your financial security? Here are some practical ways.

Avoid assets that are costly to maintain

Certain fancy items such as luxury cars are expensive to maintain. The cost of maintaining a yacht, for example, is estimated to equate to about 10 per cent of its value every year.² And this doesn't even include the operating expenses such as fuel.

Selecting goods that don't cost much to maintain, such as luxury bags and antique furniture, may help you avoid putting a dent in your savings.

Choose 'investment pieces'

Indulging in luxury items that are investment pieces may be wise. By buying goods that appreciate over time, you can enjoy them and perhaps even grow your wealth. Gold, for example, is used as both a luxury and an investment piece.

However, keep in mind that even jewellery, famous paintings, collectibles and other investment pieces may still lose value over time; it all depends on the market and how much risk – and research – you want to take on.

Secure an income stream

Although luxury assets may grow over time, they don't typically provide an income.

You may want to make sure you have investments that can offer you earnings. Consider working with a professional financial adviser on how you might invest your wealth to give you stable earnings.

By having an income stream, you could gain the independence to pursue the things you want, including investing in your passions.

Build up your long-term savings

Having a big enough nest egg for your retirement is crucial to securing your financial future. It may give you peace of mind while allowing you to enjoy some luxuries. If you're not sure how much money you'll need for the kind of lifestyle you want in retirement, consider getting financial advice. Your financial adviser may help you draw up a plan to make sure you're on track to achieve your retirement goals.

1. Hudders, L and Pandelaere, M, May 2011, 'The silver lining of materialism: The impact of luxury consumption on subjective well-being', Journal of Happiness Studies. Accessible at: <https://link.springer.com/article/10.1007/s10902-011-9271-9>

2. Rudow, L, April 2014, 'The real cost of owning a yacht', YachtWorld. Accessible at: <https://www.yachtworld.com/boat-content/2014/04/real-cost-owning-yacht>

For the latest news and information from Financial Services Partners visit www.financialservicespartners.com.au/about-us/fsp-news

IMPORTANT NOTE: The information provided in this document, including any tax information, is general information only and does not constitute personal advice. It has been prepared without taking into account any of your individual objectives, financial situation or needs. Before acting on this information you should consider its appropriateness, having regard to your own objectives, financial situation and needs. You should read the relevant Product Disclosure Statements and seek personal advice from a qualified financial adviser.

The views expressed in this publication are solely those of the author; they are not reflective or indicative of Financial Services Partners' position and are not to be attributed to Financial Services Partners. They cannot be reproduced in any form without the express written consent of the author.

From time to time we may send you informative updates and details of the range of services we can provide. If you no longer want to receive this information please contact our office to opt out. This information is correct as at January 2019.

Financial Services Partners Pty Ltd ABN 15 089 512 587, AFSL 237590